In Zambalaya-land
There's all that hearts and minds demand.
All lore serenely lies—and lies—
Therein, beneath our Southern skies,
In Zambalaya-land.

Dedication.

EUGENE DAVIS SAUNDERS.

It has always been the custom of the Boards of this Annual to open the volume by a dedication of its contents to some man or woman whose heart and soul have been linked with Tulane's growth

Gibson, Alderman, Hurt, Rogers, Tulane, Dixon, Mrs. Newcomb, Chaillé, Craighead, Sharp, and Dillard have all been honored in the past.

In keeping with this policy of honoring those who have honored us, we this year dedicate THE JAMBALAYA to Eugene Davis Saunders, Dean of the Law School, and a man whose unselfish devotion to the interests of a handicapped department deserve more than a mere curt passing note.

Born in that State of the most distinguished children, Virginia, in Campbell County, July 25, 1853, Eugene Davis Saunders was educated at private schools in Charlottesville and at the University of Virginia, receiving his diploma from the Law Department of that institution in 1874.

Admitted to the bar of Louisiana in 1876, he rapidly prospered and grew noted as a scholarly lawyer. To recite his legal career from that date to the time he ascended the bench would be to toll off the pages of the Louisiana Law Reports for thirty years.

In some of the most famous cases that have received judicial attention in this State, Judge Saunders has been counsel for one of the parties litigant, and has thus prominently participated in the making of our laws.

He became, early in the nineties, a member of the law firm of White, Parlange & Saunders, a firm whose fame is attested by the fact that each member subsequently became a United States Judge.

White is now on the United States Supreme Bench; Parlange served as a United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Louisiana from 1895 to his death in 1907, and was in turn succeeded by his former law partner, Saunders.

After White and Parlange became judges, the law firm of Saunders & Gurley was formed, and remained existent until Saunders' promotion to Parlange's place and Gurley's death dissolved it.

Judge Saunders' first connection with the Law School was in the latter nineties, as Professor of Common Law and Equity. In 1906 he was the prime mover in the reorganization of the School, and became Dean and Lecturer on the Louisiana Codes. From several generations of dry rot, the Tulane Law School is to-day an aged but flourishing infant of the twentieth century, destined to become the leading civilian school of law in the United States.

To Judge Saunders is this prosperity due, and the simple laurel of the dedication of this volume is an acknowledgment of that fact.

Judge Saunders is well known as a legal writer, having written an able textbook on taxation and having annotated the Louisiana Civil Code. In collaboration with H. H. White, he has issued a book of "Notarial and Judicial Forms."

We can only express our appreciation of his work for the University by this dedication. The highest praise would be too slight for him, and we can only express our gratitude by this simple token of our appreciation.

To the Memory of
Professor John B. Ficklen.

There is a plan divinely planned,
Which man for centuries has scanned
In vain; man's mind can never see
Eternity's immensity.
That plan has Justice for its base,
And Love supports each rising stone;
And yet remains inscrutable
To all but Him alone.

And none but He can sit and judge
Betwixt the wrong and right;
To read Life's dim writ characters
Was not for mortal sight.
We must obey and bow and know
That justice will prevail,
That justice on this earth below
Doth suffering entail.

And yet in grief our souls cry out
For those who go before their time;
We cannot bear the taking off
Of heroes in their prime.
In flesh and blood, great soul, thou 'rt gone!
Thy spirit and thy deeds stand sure!
Not time nor change can tarnish fame
When built on works that will endure.

History of Alumni.

This year, 1908, marks the close of the first ten years of the life of this association, and its growth has been equal to that of the healthiest of Freshmen during his first ten years.

Our first meetings were regarded almost as outbreaks of insubordination, to be frowned down on and ignored as much as possible. But the wiser counsels have prevailed almost all through our history, and it was soon made clear that the organized Alumni of Tulane were destined to be the mightiest force in the direction of the affairs of the University. To get the first alumnus on the Board of Administrators required a serious, long-continued effort; now it is recognized that Tulane graduates are the men most fit to guide Tulane affairs.

And in the under-graduate life the Alumni Association is using its power, urging to greater progress, restraining rash enthusiasm, guiding, supporting; everywhere the men who have passed through these classic halls are doing all that in them lies to help those now in process of passing. Sometimes our help is gratefully accepted; often our restraining influence is rebelled against; usually our sage advice is disregarded, and next year we are called on to lend a helping hand again.

But we are always mindful of our own past errors; we know how great a power for good this ardent zeal will be when better directed, and we realize that our especial duty is to teach every Tulane student to bring glory to his Alma Mater by doing his best for her during the four years within her walls, and in all the years after he has gone outside.

Those for whom we are working must be our judges. Have we been wise, kind, helpful elder brothers? If we have, then join our ranks and take our places as you leave Tulane and carry on our work in the same spirit. The Alumni Association must eventually control the University. What progress toward that goal will the end of the second ten years show? That lies largely in your hands, you who are undergraduates now; what will you do?

A Thank Offering to Newcomb College.

We all may come with many thanks to you
For great and wondrous works performed here,
But all our praise and love cannot, I fear,
Be equal to your well-deserved due.
There are among us Seniors not a few
Whose eyes will shed at least a hidden tear
When we unwillingly must leave you, dear,
And bid a gentle, lingering adieu.
Each branch of Science, Literature, and Art
Has faithfully and slowly done its part
To instill a lasting love within our heart
For you, our future Alma Mater great;
No far-off, distant time can be too late
For us to feel deep interest in your fate.

History of Class of 1908.

The college life of the Class of 1908 will soon be over. Her active participation in Newcomb interests and pursuits is to last but a few short months longer, when the devoted follower of old Gold and Blue will go out into the world, no longer a student body, but, we hope and believe, a loyal and honored part of the Newcomb Alumnae.

We shall not go into any lengthy details of the important acts done by "'08" since she entered Newcomb in October, 1904. Indeed, such a delineation would be an impossible task in so short a space. We shall therefore confine ourselves to an account of those things accomplished during our Senior year. We have forwarded all movements for the general good of our loved College with vigor and enthusiasm. We got up the petition to the faculty for the weekly Assembly, and we believe that the entire College is glad to acknowledge that the resultant Wednesday Assemblies are delightful and instructive. We hope before the end of the session to be able to impress Dr. Dixon with the fact that it is very important that the custom of having a Baccalaureate Sermon at Newcomb should be revived.

It is true that our meritorious deeds have redounded more to the benefit of the whole College than to our special Class. We have not accomplished much upon the basket-ball field, as yet, but a Class which has done as much as ours has in other matters can surely be excused if they have neglected a little, a duty of rather less importance. We have long felt that Newcomb should not consist of classes so distinctly divided by class spirit and class enthusiasm, in which Newcomb as a whole had no share. We hope that in the years to come a Newcomb feeling will grow up deep and strong enough to submerge all interest which appertains merely to one class.

We confess that we have not made any very heroic efforts to "ameliorate social abuses"; nor have we investigated with particular care the work of such a place as Kingsley House; nevertheless, the lively interest manifested in such subjects, and the work done in the Newcomb night school, give a promising perspective of what may be done in future. If a member of "'08" can not, at a moment's notice, give an acceptable definition of space or time, she can at least truthfully say that Father Time has been kind to her in that he gave her four happy years within the loved and honored walls of Newcomb.

Ballad of Ye Cap and Gowne.

Harken, ye students of Newcomb,
To the tale I now unfolde
Of the winning or ye cap and gowne
By a band of Seniors bolde;
How they toiled through years of study,
Butler's grinne and Dixon's frowne,
To ye glory of old Newcomb
And her flag of blue and browne.

They came as little Freshmen,
But they bravely lisped "'o8"
As they buckled on their armor
And they went to meet their fate.
Oh, they waved their banner proudly!
Hark! their battle-cry, "J'y suis!"
Thus they rode (not on a pony)
Forth to victorie.

They passed through Latin's icy realms,
Through fiery Wesperean lands;
Then from ye tropics they sette sail
To ye polar Baer's frozen strands;
They wandered through ye Forest of Math,
And o'er Greek roots did they stumble;
They climbed ye tippes of lofty stars,
And into psychological depths did tumble.

Oh, ye trials and tribulations
Of ye dauntless Naughty-eight!
But at length ye sombre gowne was donned,
And ye cap was pinned on straight;
Then proud Newcomb dubbed them "Seniors,"
Brave and loyal, true and bolde,
And thus ye cap and gowne were won
By ye maydes of Blue and Golde.

May more!

History of the Class of 1908.

In a few months college life at Tulane will be a pleasant memory to the Senior Class of 1908, and the members will take their places in the rank and file of the world's workers. It may seem rash at this early stage to predict success for them, but the historian, after four years among these men, feels no hesitancy in doing so. If Perseverance and Intellect are the guides on the difficult road to the Hall of Fame, the Class of 1908 will experience no trouble in following this tortuous path, and placing its emblem in a most conspicuous place. The writer requests the indulgence of his fellow-classmates for having abused their modesty in making the above prophecy; but his duty as Senior historian would not allow him to suppress it.

The history proper of 1908 consists of a narrative of its past deeds and achievements during four years in college. To tell of all these accomplishments within the bounds set for this history is impossible, so that only a few can be related here. When the Senior Class entered Tulane four years ago, it numbered about one hundred men. As the Freshman Class of 1904, it immediately organized by electing officers, and soon began to attract attention by its remarkable activity in all branches of student life. From the very beginning "'08" began to assume the leadership, which it strengthened in the second year, and made complete in the third. The history of this Class during the Sophomore and Junior years is a reiteration of what has already been said. It is merely a record of successes, and a repetition of each event must necessarily be wearisome to the reader. It is sufficient to say that the record of 1908 in athletics, forensics, and student work bears everlasting evidence of its merit and worth.

It is now time to look into some of the causes that have brought about the above results. The two most important are individual ability and universal friendship among the members. There are many proofs of the first cause, but the modesty of the Class prevents any mention of them. The friendly feeling of the members toward each other makes student work very agreeable, and does much to relieve the monotony of the class-room.

It is with sorrow that 1908 will, in a short time, cease active student life, and take its place among the preceding classes in the Alumni. Our pleasant relations with the Faculty and close friendships formed among ourselves bind us to Tulane with ties that cannot easily be broken. We must console ourselves, however, with the fact that as Alumni we are still part of the University, and can do our share for its advancement.

History of the Class of 1908.

To enumerate the many incidents that have taken place since the organization of this great Class, and to cite the numerous thrilling experiences which have entered into its existence, would require much more space than has been allotted us; hence, we shall be compelled to confine our chronicles to such events as are paramount in our minds at present.

We shall have little to say of our remote past history; suffice it to remark in passing, that we have had all the diseases of childhood and have suffered all the complications and sequelæ incident to these maladies.

We couldn't be expected to remember every detail at such a tender age, so after entering the Dean's office, having been previously tipped in regard to the immovability of the Electrocuting Chair, we received the sad information that we were not sufficiently well read in the Catalogue, and were soon seen traveling incog. the route by which we had entered so proudly.

We were not "unique," anatomically speaking; were slow to recognize "peculiarities," and the "characteristic" complications followed; the sequel was—we had another chance. (The tooth came through at 9 P. M., and the child rested well the rest of the night.)

Clean politics is something of which we may assuredly boast, for no man within the memory of this Class has ever aspired to office, each victim only accepting nomination after ardent insistence on the part of his numerous admirers, and agreeing to accept election only when tendered a majority of the votes. Modesty, in fact, one of the characterizing virtues of men of worth, has been perhaps the predominating trait of this Class throughout its entire existence. You will quite agree with us in the statement that honor has fallen where honor was due, when we inform you that the following natural leaders of men have been wearing the goggles and steering the great automobile of medical learning through, respectively, the first, second, third, and fourth quarters of the course: T. F. Long, '04-05; Felix R. Hill, '05-06; M. C. Henry, '06-07; R. F. Derouen, '07-08.

Notwithstanding the fact that we medical men have had but little time to devote to Athletics, we may boast a Captain of the Tulane Foot-ball Team, '06-07, and a Manager, '07-08. These were none other than, respectively, James W. Conley, alias "The Pride of McGregor," "Strongheart," "Cap'n Jim," and "James Jeffries"; and T. F. Long, alias "The Short Man," "The Man with Plenty" (of hot air).

The Class may also boast a number of the smoothest "buttonhole," "hot air," "chestnut" and other species of artists that were ever allowed to perpetrate the practice of such professions upon an ignorant and unsuspecting public. A committee for the promotion of social, political, and professional ethics, appointed by the Class for the purpose of interviewing these artists, was informed by them that their aforementioned accomplishments were practiced solely as a pastime, and for the gratification of susceptible professors, and that they, each and every one, would abandon such pursuits—if for no other reason than for want of time—upon entering the actual practice of their legitimate profession.

Our numbers were somewhat diminished when several of our boys accepted internships in Charity, Touro, and other hospitals; but this loss was in a measure offset by those members of the Class of '07 who, having served in similar positions in Shreveport, Vicksburg, and Natchez, joined our ranks. We were glad to welcome these gentlemen into our midst, to have them share our few sorrows and many pleasures, and, while we regret to have lost those before mentioned, recognizing that our loss is their gain, we take comfort in our sacrifice. There are others among us who would have accepted internships in Charity and Touro had not our parents so seriously objected.

Seriously speaking, the Class of '08 has the cream of the present generation in her ranks; men who have the mental ability, ambition, integrity, and energy to succeed in any profession, and certainly to attain success in a profession for which nature, diligent application to the study of and contact with the world has so peculiarly fitted us. And as we stand ready to enter into the never-ending fight against disease, the scintillating rays from the smiling face of Fortune illuminating our shields enables us to read thereon the signatures of the greatest and best Dean, the noblest Professors, that ever adorned a Diploma; and this shall encourage us to anticipate a glorious victory.

Class Poem '08.

Ye gentlemen of Tulane,
Ye who work yourselves insane
In the Medico Department of the College,
Delving deep into the tomes,
Like a horde of hungry gnomes
Digging daily for small scraps of useful knowledge:
For your sakes I've sought the Muse
(With apologies profuse)
For a poem to the Class of nineteen-eight,
And I here present the pill,
Which please swallow, if you will,
For it's sugar-coated, smooth, and up-to-date.

Burning much of midnight oil,
And brain tissue in the toil,
You have struggled through the stage of preparation,
And the finals soon must show
Whether 'tis a tale of woe,
Or a sheepskin which shall thrill you with elation;
But should the Class of nineteen-eight
In a body graduate
And sally forth to practice for the Nation,
How the people shall rejoice,
And with one accord and voice
Hail your advent with the wildest acclamation.

Wherever, gentlemen, ye go
To do battle with the foe—
With dread diseases, pain and ills of humankind,
Even Galen's knowledge great
Would be counted second-rate
To the shining talents in your craniums combined—
Old Hippocrates himself
Would be laid upon the shelf,
Koch and Pasteur prove but futile and inane,
Sims and Weir would tear their hair,
Pancoast yield to blank despair,
When confronted with these giants of Tulane.

Wherever, gentlemen, ye go
To do battle with the foe,
Bacteria and germs will quickly scatter;
Flies that poison when they light
Will instantly put to flight
Fast behind the dread stegomyia fasciata;
Ponds that breed malaria
Will dry up within an hour,
And from the wells where typhoid fever lurks apace
Every vicious, horrid germ
Will with terror shrink and squirm,
Vamose and spread perdition in some other place.

Ah! ye nobles of Tulane,
Do I prophesy in vain
When I paint your future pathway bright with glory?
When, with vision of a seer,
I predict a high career,
In this feeble forecast of life's real story?
Undaunted, strong of heart.
Go forth and play your part
With courage, faith, and purpose never waning;
And when your work is done,
And Honor's goal is won,
Tulane will proudly boast she gave you training.

Class History of the Naughty-Nines.

“Let the daughter of Albinus tell me: If ten million nine hundred four thousand two hundred eight nineteen hundred fifths are taken from seven million two hundred sixty-nine thousand four hundred seventy-two nineteen hundred fifths, what remains? Come, you can tell.” “Three million six hundred thirty-four thousand seven hundred thirty-six nineteen hundred fifths, or nineteen hundred nine.” “Good! The simplicity of your example tempers our praise of its solution; but, perhaps, the cry of that number, nineteen hundred nine, has been the inspiration of deeds of valor and has led an army to victory. And now, O filia digna of your ancestors, if nine black kittens with bows of green romped with nine other kittens likewise decorated on the Arcade, how would you describe them?” “The naughty nines.” “In, again. Dixisti egregie et es etiam in verbis tenuis cantusque serendis.”

“Now, my young friends, as we have been studying the social and intellectual phases of the twentieth century, I think that you will be interested in an account of the college history of that remote period. Our record is based almost entirely on circumstantial evidence. Researchers were interested in a very convincing statement which they discovered. It was evidently the fragment of a class song—

‘For there’s no class at Newcomb
Like the Class of nineteen-nine.’

“From various sources, a partial history of this unique and exceptionally wonderful Class has been compiled. Diaries, locker-treasures, as one bundle of information was labelled, and, especially, college records and students’ journals, agree that this Class is the model for repetition. The Naughty-nines, as they called themselves, entered their Alma Mater in nineteen hundred and four. Fortunately, the text-books of that period contain much valuable information besides their printed lore. Prettier figures than parallelopipeds adorn the margins of geometries. Students executed these works of art. The most remarkable thing about the Freshmen was their bows. Those big, black ornaments adorned plaits and slippers. They were timid in appearance, but defiant and gritty, too. They respectfully bowed and smiled when reviewed by the Sophomore inspectors; the Fates were unkind to bring the proud Senior and sub-Fresh Class of the high school so low. Experience in the person of Sophomores was a hard teacher that instructed the Freshmen to keep locker keys hung over their hearts and lunches locked up. But suddenly something happened. These children were adopted. One of the ‘upper ten’ classes took up cudgels for their younger sisters. The Freshmen were not briskly ordered to ‘skedaddle’ any more. I do not know the etymology of some of these expressions. The number twenty-three is engraved all over the record. With this hieroglyphic occurs the expression 'Skidoo.' It may be the name of an insect. Our authority sometimes uses the word 'cut' in connection with different classes, especially gymnasium. I suppose the students were more likely to cut their fingers on gymnasium apparatus than on their wits in Latin. Blessings never come singly. Reports, adoption, holidays, examinations, picnics, parties, examinations, and vacation, all came in time. Not much is said in the autobiographies about reports and examinations. The first year left the Freshmen sadder but wiser.

"The Class of nineteen-nine, sine rivale seque et sua solus amans, did not forsake the precedent—to tease the Class below them. When that novelty wore off, the Sophomores occupied themselves with making commotions in the chemical laboratory, etc., etc. The records do not mention examinations and reports; evidently, those evils on familiar acquaintance bred contempt.

"The third year at college raised the social standing of the Naughty-nines, now Juniors, and elevated ad astra per aspera—they, the astras, were on the third floor. The Sophomores ignorantly referred to their quondam companions as 'old things' relegated to the attic, and spread the false alarm that the Juniors had taught them how to cut—whatever that means. The principal sport of all these college girls was basket-ball, a very interesting game from the illustrations. The record speaks of some of the Juniors taking 'math' and being almost killed by it. Poison ought not to be taken promiscuously. The Juniors, incidentally the other Classes too, discovered themselves about this time. They formed a glee club, and—Here the records break off abruptly. Some day, perhaps, we shall learn the fate of these brilliant young people. I shall pass around the book, that you may see the illustrations. As Juniors, our friends are gay young ladies; some are attended by boys in olive and blue sweaters. Flags of blue and brown, green and black, crimson and gray, ornament the page.

"There is the summons for recreation. Take the next eight hundred pages of history and make an outline. Excused."

The Reason.

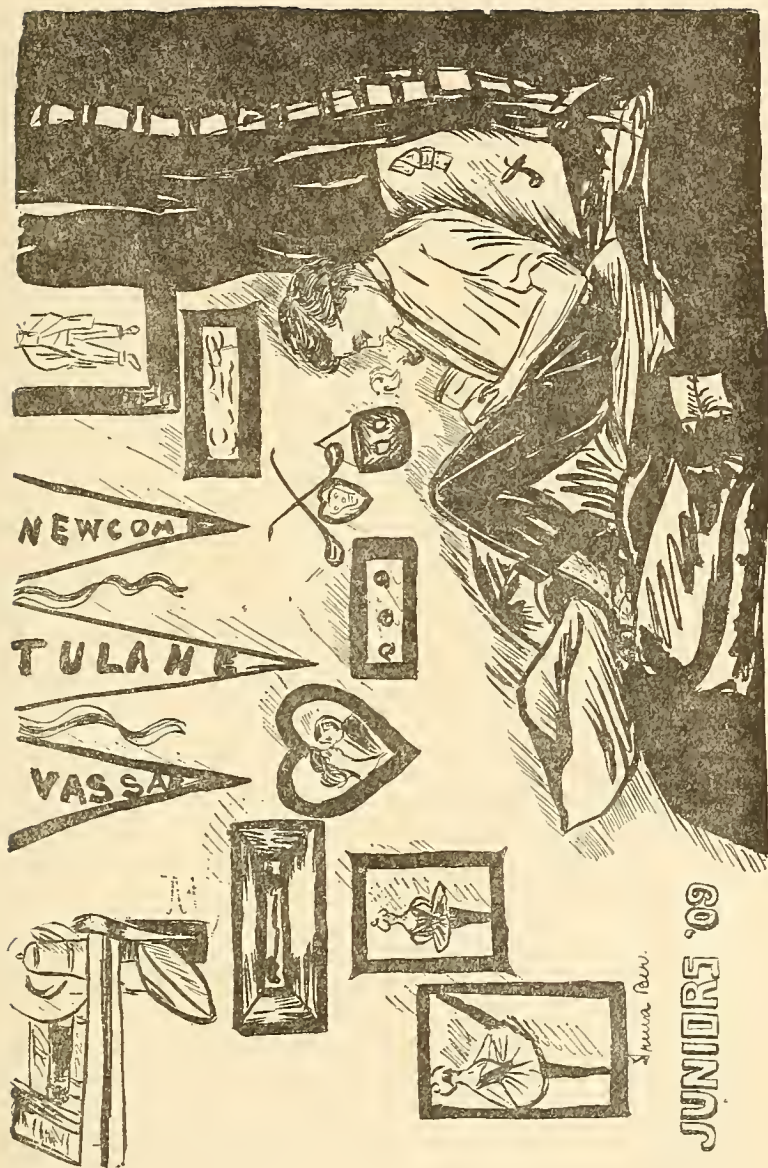

Columbus sailed over the ocean blue
(The date, fourteen hundred and ninety-two),
And what was the reason he came, think you?
 "Be the fame," he cried, "and the glory mine,
 For I have discovered the land of pine,
 The land of the home of 1909,
 Of Newcomb's 1909."

La Salle deserted his Spanish home,
And across the ocean proceeded to roam.
His reason showed he had sense in his dome!
 "Be the fame," he cried, "and the glory mine,
 For I have explored in the land of pine,
 The land of the home of 1909,
 Of Newcomb's 1909."

Our illustrious George drove the red-coats back,
And saved his land from ruin and rack,
And what was the reason at the back?
 "Be the fame," he cried, "and the glory mine,
 For I have preserved the land of pine,
 The land of the home of 1909,
 Of Newcomb's 1909."

The great men come and the great men go,
And the cause of their greatness you fain would know?
The reason is 'easy expounded so:
 "Be the fame," each cries, "and the glory mine,
 For I will serve well the land of pine,
 The land of the home of 1909,
 Of Newcomb's 1909."

But why do we see the nations pause
To watch this one figure, and hear with applause
The words that she speaks? 'Tis because—
 "Be the fame," she cries, "and the glory mine,
 For I am the pride of the land of pine,
 For I am the Class of 1909,
 Of Newcomb's 1909."

Class History 1909.

Notwithstanding we are Juniors, and far removed from the callow days of our Freshman year, and have had our Sophomoric bumps of conceit rolled out by professors who have taught not wisely, but too well, it were best to tell a few of our deeds.

On that November morning when we entered the portals of Tulane, the world stood in awe of us. The Sophomores came at our beck and call, and the Juniors and Seniors regarded us as their equals.

Throughout the year, we kept the trembling Sophs at our feet, and on Founder's Day, the only Sophomore colors in evidence were those worn by us—tied to our shoes.

Time passed and we returned to our Sophomore year, when we faced a class of Freshmen about three times as large as ours. What we did to them in the first part of the year has been chronicled by another historian, but to fill their cup of misery to the brim, on Founder's Day, we bravely invaded the campus with a small but brave band, and accomplished what had hitherto been considered impossible—we captured the Tank from the Freshmen. We won from them the debate and oratorical contest. To crush them completely, the whole Faculty united in praising us. Was it not our Class that forced the renowned Brown, of Tulane, to abandon his famous by-word "perhaps" and adopt a more formidable one—"ultimately"?

Did we not show to the world that comets travel to infinity and back—thus affording a safe passage for that intrepid explorer, J. N. Ivey?

It is true that there are few of us, but with our hearts filled with the "sacred fire" of Friendship, we will go through our College course with honors—and when we enter the battle of Life, will not only succeed, but, Alexander-like, will have to seek other worlds to conquer.

History of Class '09.

It is almost a useless task to write another history of the Class of '09, while the public at large is still so familiar with its wonderful and majestic accomplishments in the field of medical science. Not since the days of Paracelsus (Theophrastus Bombastus Von Hohenheim) have so many great discoveries been made in this science, and with such incredible rapidity. The whole medical world is amazed and astonished. You can't pick up a medical journal published anywhere in the United States, these days, but that you shall see recorded on its pages accounts of more great discoveries. Every editor devotes pages in eulogies to the magnificent advances and successes obtained by members of this world-famed Class, the Class of '09. Kings and emperors from all the nations of the earth have sent embassies of appreciation here to bow down before this Class and thank its individual members for the signal work done in eradicating disease and alleviating human suffering. Never before in the history of the world have the efforts of mortal man been so richly rewarded in any field of endeavor, nor has civilization ever so nearly approached the ideal Utopian state as now, under the influence of the achievements of this wonderful Class. Sickness has fled in the wildest consternation before our methods. Even at the present time, pain, suffering, and the thousand ailments that mankind is heir to are seldom, if ever, seen. Soon Sickness, weary of its vain flights, shall fold its tents like the Arab, and in secret steal away from its earthly haunts under the shadows of night, to serve in endless exile in some unknown, deserted world. Then shall Ponce De Leon's beautiful dreams of the fountain of youth come true, and youth and beauty shall be perpetualized here on the earth. Kingdoms shall rise and fall, worlds shall crumble and decay, and the sun shall some day cease to shine; but the glory of this Class shall never fade, but continue to brighten throughout the ages.

P. S.—The achievements of the Class of '09 have aroused such bitter jealousy in the other classes that various attempts have been made to rob them of their honors and to destroy that abiding faith and confidence that the public has placed in them.

The following letter, published in the daily papers as coming from a '09 man, was really a true incident in the life of a '08 man. Here 's the letter:

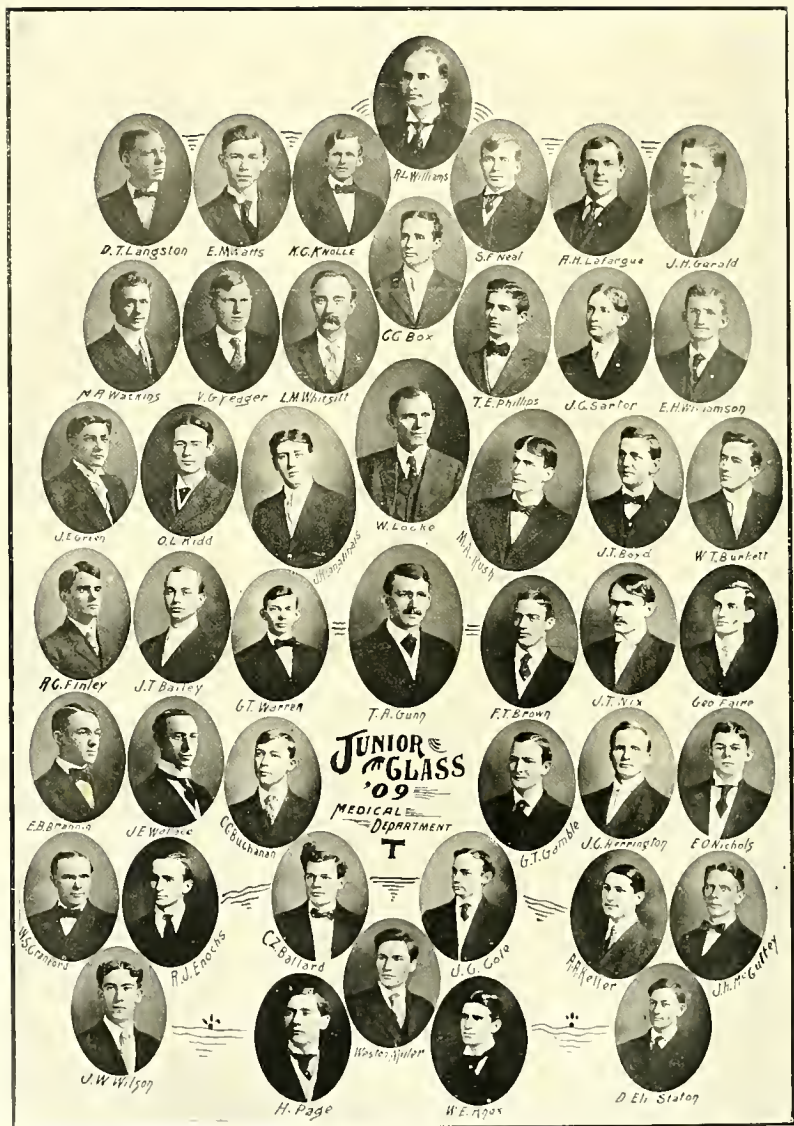

"DEAR HISTORIAN,—Have you killed anybody yet? I have two stars in my crown. My first patient was an elderly 'colored lady,' suffering with an ingrowing toe-nail. While attempting to relieve the condition, I accidentally cut off the toe. 'Her blood being bad' at the time, alarming symptoms began to develop, and I found it necessary to amputate the foot just above the knee on the following day. The operation was perfectly successful, and the most beautiful one that I ever performed. If the patient had not died that very night, I would have invited you down to see it. I will report next case in my next letter.

"Yours,

Let the public look with disdain and contempt on all such articles as the foregoing letter, and believe firmly in the superiority of the Class of '09 when restoration to perfect health is desired.

Lapland and Laplanders.

SITUATION.—Lapland is situated on a dark gallery or shaded nook, preferably in an easy chair; but the Laplanders appear to be of an indifferent disposition, and any old bench or chair will do. It is seen to better advantage on a dark gallery any time after dark, until the wee small hours of the morning. Why this should be is readily understood, since these people are very timid (?) and do not care to be seen by the many tourists who are continually seeking an occasion to butt in.

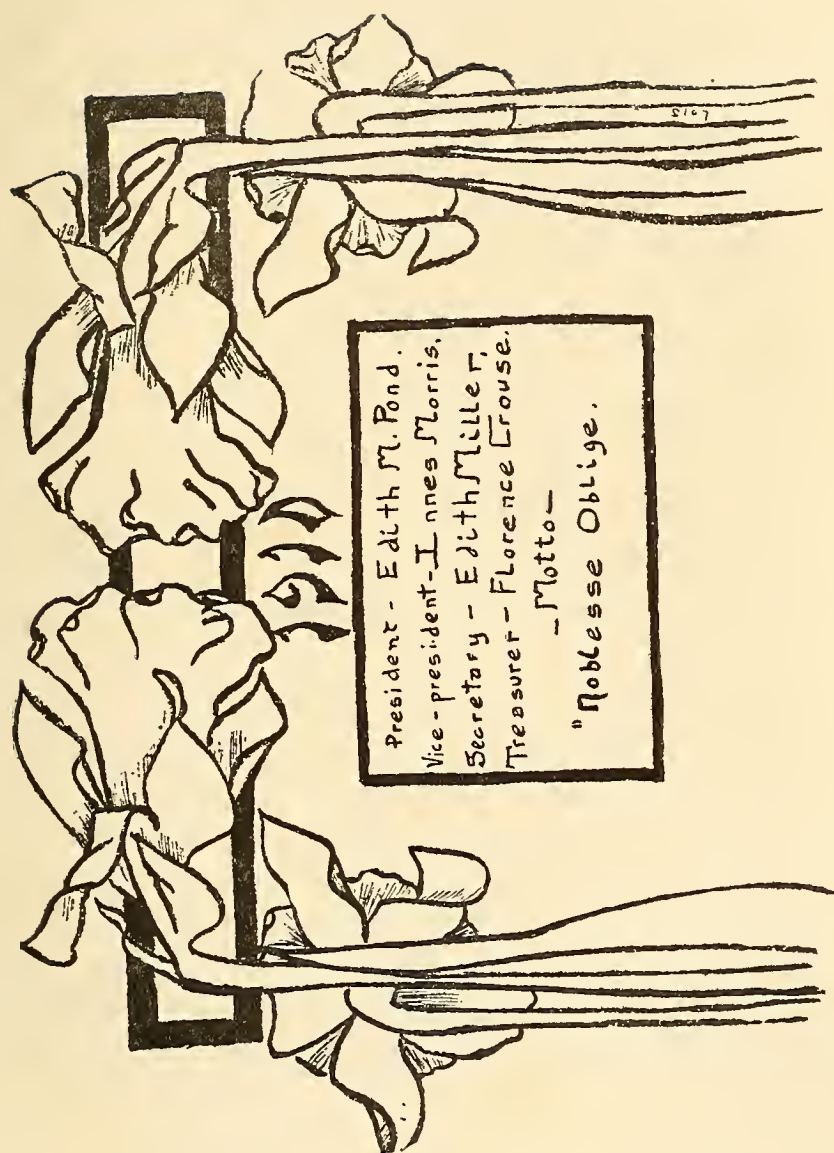

CLIMATE.—The climate of this country is very healthful, and is especially beneficent for heart-troubles, blues, and other prevalent diseases of this character. It is very conducive to good-fellowship. One very peculiar feature of this country is that darkness prevails the year round, but this is considered by the inhabitants to be an advantage rather than a nuisance.

INHABITANTS.—The inhabitants of Lapland are composed entirely of the weaker sex. In this country one is an armful, and two at the same time is a superabundance. The population has reached its greatest limit, since there is not room for another.

PRODUCTS.—The best known product of this remarkable country are oceans of joy and cramped legs.

MANUFACTURES.—The best known of these, although the least useful, is air-castles. New processes are discouraged as the old methods are found to fill the bill sufficiently well. But, notwithstanding this fact, we can not call the inhabitants unprogressive. The recent hard times have not affected the manufacturing output of this country to any appreciable extent.

Sophomore Class Poem.

At the roseate hour of sunrise
All the earth is wrapt in gold,
All the olive-tinted tree-tops
Whisper tales, unknown of old.

And the fragrance of sweet blossoms
By the breeze is borne aloft,
And the beauties of all nature,
Mingling, tell one story oft.

All the songsters softly trilling
With the breezes harmonize
In their oft-repeated ditties
Praising something to the skies.

And each mortal stops to ponder
On their joy and ecstasy,
As to why they're gayly whisp'ring
What inspires their rhapsody.

If we strive to hear their murmurs
As the breezes lightly blow,
Our minds will fill with wonder,
Beating hearts with pride will glow.

For the voices of fair Nature
Cry out to the ears of men,
That the colors gold and olive
Emblemize the Class of '10.

And each lightly quiv'ring leaflet,
Gently rustling, sings once more
Of the glory, fame, and victory
Of the Newcomb Sophomore.

At the fleeting hour of sunset
All the earth is wrapt in gold,
Yet of 1910's great triumphs
Myriads still remain untold.

CLASS POET.

Sophomore Class History.

The Class of 1910 became a real factor in the life of Tulane last year. It was the most representative Freshman Class that ever "came down the Pike." In this respect it was entirely different from the present Freshman Class. Last year's Freshmen were all grown-up men at the very beginning of their career, while the members of the Class of 1911 were and are still candidates for the nursery.

Above all things, the Sophomores are "dead game sports," not only with respect to their "nobby" little class hats and "audible" sox, but also in the athletic sense. During the present year everything "doing" at Tulane was led or "backed" by Sophomores. The Class of '10 gave the 'Varsity several good men, among others "The Powerful End." The Tulane Track Team is composed mostly of Sophomores and we were well represented on the Basket-ball Team. We gave the 'Varsity Base-ball Team its Captain in the person of "The Powerful End." The Class Foot-ball Team won the inter-class championship and, after giving the Freshies a "mud-bath" to the tune of 16 to 2 on Thanksgiving day, the latter were content to hide their heads under their baby caps.

A Sophomore is worse than "Rough on Rats" to a poor little innocent Freshman. But in the end the Sophomore is a benefit to the University, the public, and the aspiring infants. To begin with, '10 taught the entire Class of '11 the proper way to walk (to Newcomb), and how to wear its clothes in an artistic manner (inside-out). They made 1911 keep quiet, as "Children should be seen, and not heard." The Sophomores set the Freshies a worthy example, and if they "crawl" in the tracks of 1910, they may hope to attain "the glory everlasting."

The Class of '10 has accomplished many things. They have never had any trouble in handling the Freshies; on the contrary, the latter take their defeats at the generous hands of 1910 as babies take milk from the bottle. They have handed the Faculty so many "lemons" that the "D. P. W." would have to work overtime to cart them away. They can teach Professor Fortier French history from his own book, make "Jerry" look like a sport, and entertain Miss Bell in the Library. There are many expert riders among us—they ride "jacks." Many of us know the way to Cusach's Corner, and when "loaded," can get home without being exploded. Some (the Engineers) are good "knockers," having had experience with hammers in the Shops.

The word Sophomore originally meant "Wise Fool"; but when used to refer to 1910, it means "Wise Guy." The Sophomores are the "goods" all right. Well, I guess! We have many valuable specimens in the collection; they range from "The Man Monkey" to "Cupid, the Blind God of Love." The Class of 1910 is and always will be synonymous with perseverance, courage, success, and good-fellowship. Well, so long; may we meet again next year, and nine 'rahs for "The Garnet and Blue."

History of Class of 1910.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

A. Miller was dipping water out of a Branch with a Greene Bean Kahn, when another Miller spied him, and thought, "That fellow is Owen me Moore than he will pay"; so he caught him with a Savage half-Nelson, and in a Trice sent him Reeling into the Brown water. Old King Cole was Staring at them, and Wisely said, "This is Child's play," and, like a Pope, restored Love and Peace.

The names above capitalized, with others, constitute the Class roll of '10. Contrary to custom, we will not relate how the college authorities stood around, open-mouthed, when '10 matriculated. Rather, it was a case of give and take. Dr. Chaillé took our money and gave us pretty little pasteboard squares, Mr. Belfield took our names and gave us a smile, Mr. Bacon took our change and gave us a few pondercus books, Mr. Metz took our breath, and Alfred took our measure. Then we started on our four-years race for imitation sheepskins.

When not astounding the professors with its great intellectuality, the Class tackled athletics, and made everybody sit up and take notice. With Greene as full-back, Miller on the Base-ball Team, Love taking his "T" on the track, and others participating in various ways, the record was one to be proud of. So the Class held its head high and spoke only to a few favored professors. Its scholarship and erudition were marvelous, though some professors "failed" a few, just out of habit.

Having disposed of final examinations with an airy wave of the pencil, the members of the Class scattered and passed the summer in various ways, strolling back again on October 21, '07. Some were missing, to the regret of all, but there were recruits, the chief in point of size being Anderson. To a Sophomore that is sufficient, but for the benefit of the expectant world we will remark that Anderson is a good-natured human mountain, whom Dr. Sexton at once appointed assistant in his quizzes.

After paying its respects and money to Dr. Chaillé, the Class dusted off its books and went to work, occasionally squelching a contumacious Freshman who dared thrust himself upon its notice. During the summer it had had the schedule revised, keeping the Freshmen out of the Hospital so as not to be in the way, and in other ways arranging things to its satisfaction. When the foot-ball season opened, it turned out and showered itself and Tulane with glory, gore and dust, and intends to do likewise in base-ball and in Spring Games.

But one examination has so far materialized, and to so learned a class it was a nothing, sacré bleu! and vanished as dew before the sun. Sic semper examinis!

Before closing we must needs mention the most illustrious of the Class: Newhauser and Hountha, the clinicians; Sport Hicks, of Baton Rouge (sometimes called Staring), whose monograph on the thyroid gland has made him famous; Faget, the anatomist; Ficklen, the flyclogist; these, and others too numerous to mention, are in our ranks. In addition to this, a Benedict Club is under contemplation, having Anderson, Brown, Guillot, and McGehee as charter members, with additions as Cupid dictates.

So keep your eye on '10; you will hear of its great doings as time goes on.

Cigar Smoke.

There is nothing I like better,
In this weary world of woe,
Than to sit in gown and slippers
By the fireside's ruddy glow;
Just to sit and dream, and, dreaming,
Love my darling from afar,
As I see her gentle features
In the smoke of my cigar.

Other men may like to travel
And to wander far from home,
But I'd rather just stay in
This little cottage all alone;
And on rainy, misty evenings,
When the heavens send forth no star,
Just to sit and watch the phantoms
In the smoke of my cigar.

Oftentimes I actually think
The ghost-like rings have life,
As they wander round and mingle
Like all men in mortal strife—
Till at last they fade and vanish
As the vanquished of a war;
But I soon revive them as I watch
And light a fresh cigar.

P. DEVLIN, '10.

Freshman Class History.

The brilliant Class of 1911 was most cordially welcomed at the gates of Newcomb on October first, 1907. Even the Sophomores allowed us (wasn't it kind of them?) to put our colors, our great big banner, in place of honor on the front of the main building of Newcomb College. Later we were most charmingly entertained by the Y. W. C. A., and then by our dear sister Class 1909, who presented us with a beautiful 1911 banner.

Now, I will tell you something of this Class that made so royal an entrance into Newcomb. "Fama semper vivat!" ("May our fame live always!") is our motto, and right nobly have we lived up to it. In this our Freshman year we have accomplished deeds and achieved honors that have planted our fame so firmly that it shall live forever and forever and a day. The roots have sunk deep in the rich soil at Newcomb, and the branches tower already above the heads of the Sophomores, and are spreading wider and reaching higher each day. It is no child's play to perpetuate a fame as glorious as ours is, and to watch that it does not grow dim, but that each year adds to it a new luster. We are equal to the task we have set ourselves to, for the members of the Class of 1911 are not "such stuff as dreams are made of"—we are real workers; we work hard and play hard, and we love our work almost as much as we do our play. Our officers are worthy of the important positions they fill and have shown that they know how to organize and govern a high-spirited, perhaps, but thoroughly fine class.

The future will show, better than I can prophesy, what other mighty deeds this Class will accomplish. Just wait and see. And now, let me propose a toast: first, and best of all, "Newcomb!" and then, "The Class of 1911!"

Freshman Class Poem.

THE ENTRANCE OF 1911.

On Matriculation Day.

“You look young, Miss,” the wise Sophomore said,
“With your flag proudly held in your hand;
But when on the morrow that flag will be gone,
You will look like a grammar-school band.”

On the First Day of School.

“We looked young, dear Miss Sophomore,” the little Fresh said,
“But we 'd learned more than you, just the same;
For we knew that whoever runs off with our flag
Gives it back, having lost her good name!”

History of Class of 1911.

The thirtieth of September, 1907, is imprinted on the life-calendar of every member of this Class as a red-letter day. Not because of the sanguinary character of the battles fought that day with the Sophomores on the campus, but because it marked a new era of our existence; when, in fact, we were changed from unsophisticated "prep" school graduates into full-fledged members of old Tulane. After this we were to go by the name of "Freshmen," and we soon proved that just as the new article is better than the old, so the Freshman excels, both physically and mentally his upper-classmen, especially the Sophomores.

It was exactly one week after this that the "Sophs" went through another harrowing experience at our hands. They were made to take a bath! After being steered across the pond, and having so excited our curiosity that we must needs follow their example to experience the sensation, they were then hauled by us through slime and mud, to the cheers of hundreds of spectators. Wet, bedraggled, the sorry-looking bunch returned to Gibson Hall, having learned that they could not tamper with the "Freshies" with impunity.

However, it is one thing to be superior in brawn and another to excel in brain. But the Freshmen have gained the reputation of being equally good in both. Were we not the first class, as Dean Dillard said in his speech on opening day, to enter on standards such as all other high-grade colleges require? Ask any of the Faculty if we have not justified the brilliant start and proven that we are capable, as a whole, easily to carry on the prescribed course. We, at least, know that this is true, and we feel confident that, when four years have passed and we shall have been successfully graduated, Tulane will be able to point with pride to this, the Class of 1911.

Medical Freshman History.

To the friends of Tulane University, and especially those of the Freshman Class of the Medical Department, we are pleased to submit a brief account of what has transpired within our domain since we entered upon the study of our profession.

Since the time of Hippocrates, there has not been a more promising Class of fellows who have taken up the study of Medicine, than the one hundred and nineteen men who entered Tulane Medical on October 21st, with the resolve to accomplish a thorough knowledge of the Healing Art, and attain a place among the learned in the coming generation of doctors.

It is indeed gratifying to each of us to know that we have, so far, made unparalleled progress in our work, and that the majority of us are delighted with the study of our profession. We have dreamed of our pathway strown with flowers, and awoke to find ourselves confronted with difficulties that would have discouraged even the most persistent scholars of antiquity; however, we are now enjoying the pleasant realization of having overcome all difficulties and discouragements, and are hoping the worst has been, rather than is to come. We are resolved to continue in the same persistent, studious, and never-tiring way, until we have served our four years in Tulane Medical; after which time we hope to be able to serve our friends in whatever way they may need a man of the Healing Art. We are anxious for our friends to know that the majority of our fellows are men who joined our ranks for the purpose of becoming proficient in the Science and Art of Medicine, and that their resolves have been sufficiently carried out to justify members of the Faculty in giving us special mention for attention, scholarship, and enthusiasm. To the members of the Faculty who have encouraged us with statements to that effect, we extend our profound and sincere thanks, and we hope that ere our four years have expired, what has been so complimentarily said of us may be further justified by our continued progress and merit.

With Chaillé Jamison as our President, Cooper as Vice-President, Alvin as Secretary and Treasurer, Tichenor and Weissinger as our JAMBALAYA representatives, and Peters as Historian, we are making good progress toward an M.D. degree. If our course is not interrupted by some unexpected cause, we shall be pleased to have our friends meet us at the Tulane Theater in 1911, and see us appear upon the stage as Doctors of Medicine.

There is a spirit of good-fellowship existing between the individual members of our Class, as well as those of the upper classes, and when it comes to affairs of mutual interest, or for the welfare of the University, we all join as one for their promotion. Not only do we maintain this spirit among ourselves, but we intend to encourage it in all succeeding classes so long as we remain here.

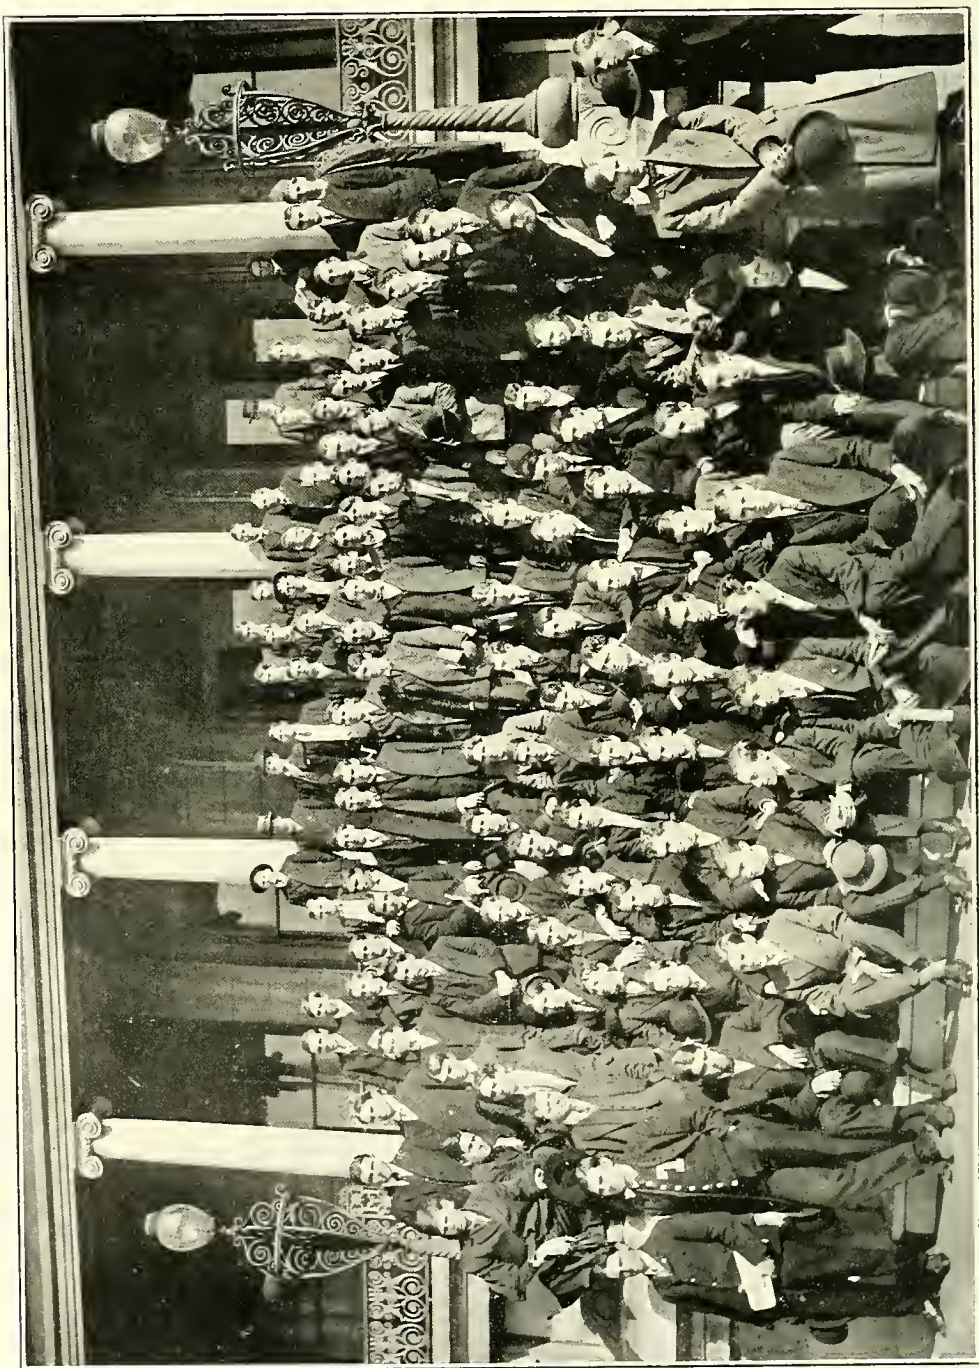

We have not been with Tulane long enough to make a long history, therefore we shall discontinue our writing until the year 1909, when you may again expect an account of the occurrence of events within our domain.

Trusting that what we have said concerning our career to date may be welcomed by our friends, we beg to remain,

Respectfully,

THE CLASS OF 1911.

History of the Law Class.

NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA,
January 22, 1908.

DEAR ARTHUR,—Your letter reached me a few days ago, and I was glad to see that in spite of your political activities you still took sufficient interest in college affairs to inquire how the Law School was managing to get along without the illustrious Class of 1907. Since you ask me to do so, I'll try to give you the news of the Department.

In the first place, as you may already know, the entrance requirements have been made the same as those for the academic colleges; and in addition to this the three-year course has gone into effect. These two changes have so combined to restrict the number of would-be lawyers that there are only fifty-five students enrolled at present, as compared to ninety-odd last session.

Before giving you the Class history proper, perhaps I should mention certain of its marked characteristics, which have been brought to light in the course of its existence thus far. They might well be called the "Ostensible Aims of the Law Class," and are as follows:

1. To ask irrelevant questions, and to cough as much as possible.
2. To "down the clique" very effectively in the Class elections.
3. To omit reading the cases assigned in the case-books.
4. To attend en masse the delightful and instructive meetings of the Law Debating Club.
5. To sign numerous petitions asking to be relieved of the study of "La plus belle langue du monde."
6. To receive certificates of imbecility.

To come back to the history proper, the first event of importance was the Class election, which took place shortly after the opening of the session. Here, in a "distracted meetin'," made memorable by the orations of Mr. Talley, Mr. Theard, and others, Mr. Augustus Garland was duly elected President of the Law Class, a position which he has filled to the satisfaction of all concerned. The remaining officers were elected with little or no opposition.

Shortly after this event, the equanimity of the Class was once more disturbed, when Judge Saunders announced one morning that no one would be allowed to graduate without having stood an examination in the translation of law French. Naturally, the Class objected to this unexpected addition to their already heavy burdens; and (in somewhat modified terms) they expressed their feelings to the Dean. However, he shirked the responsibility of having done the cruel deed, and referred the Class to the Board of Administrators, offering to assist them by furnishing a "certificate of imbecility," to the effect that, as far as he could discover the Class was incapable of learning anything at all. This kind offer was declined, and though nothing has yet been decided by the Board, the Class is discreetly pursuing the study of French under the guidance of Professor Fortier.

In spite of this extra work, the Department has been able materially to assist the University in the realm of athletics. Brogan and Scarborough were extremely useful, as well as ornamental, to the 'Varsity Foot-ball Eleven; while Phelps and others ably represent us on the Basket-ball Team.

Turning now from the athletic to forensic contests, you will be glad to hear that the Law Debating Club is still in existence; and, under a revised constitution recently adopted, it bids fair to be better, and of more benefit to the students, than ever before. And with such training as it affords, Law men should easily take first honors on the University debating teams, which will soon be chosen for the contests in the spring.

Leaving the past, now, and looking into the future, let us see what it has in store for the School as a whole, and especially for the graduating Class of 1908. Looming up ominously in the foreground stand the half-year exams, which have been inaugurated this year for the first time. These start on February the third, and continue through the week—a week so fraught with anxiety and uncertainty that even Cosulich and Adema dread the very thought of it.

After these ordeals are over, life will become somewhat brighter; and moreover, various social attractions will come along, to divert us from our troubles with Evidence, and the Civil Code. Tulane Night, Mardi-Gras, and Founders' Day are landmarks to look forward to, and to enjoy both in anticipation and in remembrance.

"And what next?" you say. Then will come more exams, and after these, we shall no longer have to "think it over for next time." No more shall we hear how they practiced, "At least, in the State from which I came." Coughing may be indulged in to an unlimited extent; and we may forget, till we start to practice, that Gibbons v. Ogden and Brown v. Maryland ever existed. In short, our college duties will be over forever.

Finally the "Great Day" will arrive on which, in spite of the extra French, and in spite of the Board of Examiners with which we were threatened, we shall array ourselves in cap and gown and receive the diplomas that entitle us to practice our profession. And who doubts that we shall forthwith become learned practitioners and prominent members of the Bar?

Yours truly,

CLASS HISTORIAN.

A flutter in her heart,
A few sweet words to linger
That time may never part.

A ring upon her finger,
And every one knows why;
Yet you could find and bring her,
From earth or sea or sky.

The match for that dear finger
But one, so I am told:
The one that Church will ring her
Around a band of gold.

Not So Bad.

"I love you no more,"

She told me one night;

"I love you no more,"

Deplorable plight!

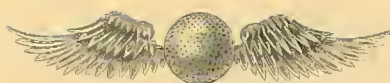

"As much as before

I love you all right;

But I love you no more,"

She told me one night.

Law Debating Club.

An organization, to be successful, should be created to fill some need. The Law Debating Club was created to fill a very urgent need, and it has therefore been successful.

On January 26, 1906, a few energetic and class-spirited men, headed by A. Giffen Levy, formed the Club that has since developed into a monument to their earnestness. The beginnings were modest, the growth stupendous. The Club had a duty to perform, and started to do so with surprising vigor. The society grew rapidly under the management of Mr. Levy, who was twice President of the body, and who was assisted in his difficult task by Vice-President Dawkins, Secretary Adrian Schwartz, and Treasurer E. H. Richard.

The Law students, from year to year, are beginning more to realize the importance of forensic training and the wisdom of undergoing that training while still at college, instead of waiting to do so under the hawk-like scrutiny of opposing counsel or the critical and impatient surveillance of a fatigued judge.

It would be gross negligence (with apologies to Mr. Lemann) to fail to add a special word as to the administration of President Talley, whose term expired on April last. Just as Mr. Levy was the Columbus who discovered the need of a club of this kind, so was Mr. Talley the Cabot who explored to the fullest extent its possibilities, and to his efforts mainly is the present status of this organization due. The other officers for 1908 were: Gilbert Cosulich, Vice-President; A. P. Garland, Secretary; B. F. L. Feitel, Treasurer.

It is to be hoped that the Law Debating Club of the future will challenge one of its rival societies to a public debate, and show the collegiate world that the labors of its founders have not been in vain.

ALABAMA STATE CLUB

A History of Debating at Tulane.

University life finds expression in many ways, but no activities are more representative of the real aims and ideals of a college than debating and forensics. Readiness in speech, clearness in statement, and ease of expression will readily stamp the all-around man. To gain this end, literary societies are organized and the various speaking contests are arranged; but the highest training in this line comes from preparation for and participation in inter-collegiate debates.

Since 1901 Tulane has annually met some great university in debate. Until 1907 we debated with the University of Texas alone. That year, however, we added Georgia to our list. Of the seven debates with Texas, Tulane won four, and she has the proud and rare record of winning three debates in succession—those of 1904, 1905, and 1906.

The first Tulane-Texas debate was held in 1901 in our city. Tulane was represented by Ralph J. Schwartz and F. C. Claiborne. They defended the negative of a proposition which proposed the permanent retention of the Philippines, and, after a stubborn fight, won a victory for Tulane. This was a great event. Governor Blanchard presided, and the late E. B. Kruttschnitt was chairman of the Committee of Judges. The victory was a proud one, and set Tulane out on a debating career with colors streaming. Ours was the first blood.

The second debate was held in Austin in 1902. Our men were C. A. Du Champ and C. D. Jankies. Tulane defended the proposition that the United States should conclude foreign reciprocity treaties, and lost. The score now was even. H. P. Dart was alternate. Texas then took the lead by scoring another victory in our city in 1903. Restricted immigration was the question debated. Tulane defended the negative, and lost. Our representatives were Frank E. Powell and J. H. Gilfoil, with G. H. Wright as alternate. It was, perhaps, the hardest-fought debate of our record, but the decision went to Texas. Edw. O. Tabor presided.

Then came Tulane's series of brilliant victories, which reflect lasting credit on our debaters and on the Faculty Committee on Debating. It began in 1904, when Warren Woodville and Giffen Levy defeated Texas in Austin by defending the negative of the proposition that trades-unions in the United States have shown a tendency detrimental to the general welfare. Our interpretation and argument won the unanimous decision of the judges. Sol Weiss was Tulane's alternate. In 1905, Giffen Levy and Sol Weiss won another victory in New Orleans. The proposition was, "Independent political action is better than efforts for reform within the party." Tulane said "No" to this proposition, and won a sweeping victory, receiving again the unanimous decision of the judges. Edw. O. Tabor was alternate this year and Alexander Ficklen presided. Then followed victory

No. 3 in Austin. We debated the question of Railroad Rate Regulation, then prominent in national legislative circles, and settled it for all time by defending the affirmative and gaining the decision by a vote of two judges to one. It was a brilliant fight. Texas fought heroically, but in vain, against the arguments of Herbert W. Kaiser and Lionel C. Durel. Alexander Ficklen was alternate. This gave Tulane three straight victories, and Texas made a supreme effort to redeem herself and she came to our city in fighting-trim. The 1907 subject was, "Resolved, That the immigration of southern Italians to the Southern States would be advantageous to those States." Texas chose the affirmative. Tulane's representatives were Edw. O. Tabor and Alexander Ficklen, with St. Jean Perrett alternate. Frank Powell presided. Both sides fought hard to the very end, and when the decision was announced, it was found that Texas won by a vote of two judges to one. With Texas then the case stands as follows: Of the seven debates Tulane has won four. Each university has won one series and each has one victory on a new series.

1907 saw our first debate with the University of Georgia. It was held in New Orleans on May 13th, with St. John Perrett and Gayle Aiken as our representatives. The subject was the same as the one submitted to Texas, and Georgia, like Texas, defended the affirmative through C. N. Fiedleson and W. Miller. It was a strong and interesting debate, and, but for a momentary unpleasantness, reflected great credit on both colleges. Georgia won the decision. Tulane and Georgia meet at Athens this year to debate the Philippine question. We are glad to note the friendly feeling that exists between Tulane and her sister institutions in the South, and we feel sure that debating will further that feeling.

Owing to an unusual delay on the part of Texas in submitting a subject for this year (even after repeated efforts by Tulane to call their attention to the delay), there will be no debate between Tulane and Texas. We regret this breach in our series, for our relations with Texas have always been most pleasant, and we hope to resume our relations in 1909.

A movement was inaugurated at Tulane this year which promises to help along debating activities here immensely. Through the efforts of Mr. H. W. Kaiser and Dr. Aldrich, a Tulane Debating Council has been organized. Its members are: H. W. Kaiser, Chairman; F. White, Secretary-Treasurer; St. John Perrett, Gilbert Cosulich, C. E. Dunbar, Esmond Phelps, B. D. Tally, A. B. Booth, and Edw. O. Tabor. This Council's aim is to coöperate with the Faculty Committee on Debates in the management of all debating matters at Tulane.

Tulane's debating record is a proud one. Especial credit is due to Dr. M. A. Aldrich, Dr. W. B. Smith, Dr. W. Miller, Dr. Robert Sharp, and to the late Professor John R. Ficklen for their interest and aid in the debates. They have spared neither time nor pains, and have always worked hard to put out a winning team.

Tulane's record must be maintained.

There was a good ball nine at Tulane,
Whose manager and captain were insane.
The team played so hard
That they backed off the card
Every team that came down on the train.

There was a game sport named Menefee,
Who was so old that he couldn't see;
But money was so rare
That he tore out his hair,
And now he's as bald as can be.

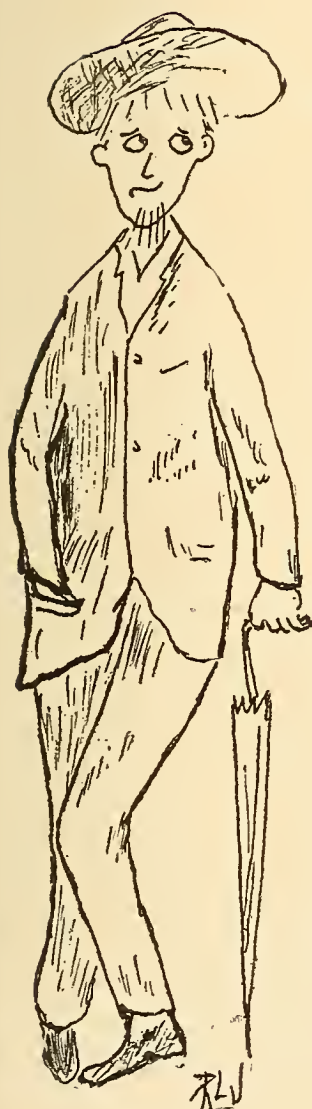

HISTORY REPEATS.

Our town is gaining fame each day,
The latest in historic way,
For down the ages sure will shine
The Newcomb "Mason-Dixon Line."

When McNeese Was a Freshman.

WHUT WUZ IT?

Whut wuz it first I seen, when I first seen this frazzlin' town?

Whut wuz it bumped inter me an' almost got my bean?

An' jolted up dad's watch—all red-haired an' dressed in brown?

Say, can anyone tell me where it's gone, thet whut I seen?

After I got off the train, I sorter santered down Canal, A pirutin' round to see whut I could see.

I stopped in front uv a nickel show to buy a ticket frum the gal,

When somethin' bumped inter me.

I looked around an' there wuz the derndest sight—

The loudest-lookin' sister thet I ever seen;

It had on a red sashay an' a hat all painted white,

An' wuz a-eyein' me like some kinder queen.

I says, says I, "Howdy, Miss? I hope I didn't jar ye none"

She says, "Oh! keep the change; you didn't ruffle me.

If you think you're tryin' to butt into a lady, I'll hand you one;

I'll have you locked up somewhere an' throw away the key."

Then it sailed off around the corner lookin' downright mad,

A-leavin' me standin' stock-still an' dumb.

Then I woke up, missed dad's watch an' all the change I had.

An' I'm wonderin' yit whut wuz it first put me on the bum.

NEWCOMB'S LEAP YEAR PROFESSOR.

[NOTE.—Professor Mason stepped into the Library for a moment, and a small pile of books on the French Revolution easily hid him from view. Some unknown parties entered, and, not (?) seeing him, closed the door on leaving. He looked at his watch and found it was time to go. With his grip, he made for the door; it was locked. He must meet his class; he would not call for aid. Nothing was left but to scale the wall—he scaled it.]

He perched upon the partition high;
He surveyed the floor with grace;
His grip in hand, his class-hour nigh—
Alas! 't was an awful space
For a man to leap, . . . but not for him;
So off he jumped with a bound.

You 've seen a frog
Jump from a log,
Utter a sound,
And fall to the ground.

Well, like the frog, he jumped and split the air;
Two girls beheld him flying there;
They screamed and ran, they knew not where;
Then came a noise—a groan—he landed fair!

When asked to explain, he simply said:
"I 'm willing to jump, just any old span;
'o8 is Leap Year. Well," he said,
"I 'm ready to jump, just as much as I can."

Lives of Heroes.

FREDERICK WESPY.—Born at Gotha, in Thüringen, Germany; came to New Orleans at early age (?); taught German at Newcomb College; was in perfect health until hectored by Newcomb girls; chief characteristic was celebrating two birthdays every year.

As a Writer.—Very prolific.

German Literature Notes.—Chief work depicts lives of many German writers. Wespy especially fond of long, characteristic, and peculiar words, so tæchoscopy and peripety; likes to talk, but squelches girls who talk.

BY F. WEIL.

J. T. B. MASON.—His Life.

(a) Born in Stradford, Ontario, Canada.

(b) Very precocious child; at early age was known to speak of the rice of breakfast porridge.

(c) Chief means, as it ware, of introducing lecture system into Newcomb College.

His Work.

(a) Lectures; very interesting.

(b) Firm believer in woman's rights.

(c) Would give opinion on any subject at a moment's notice.

(d) Nom de plume, "The Man with the Satchel."

(e) Very popular with audience.

BY F. WEIL.

PIERCE BUTLER.—SYNOPSIS OF LIFE AND WORK.

Chapter I.—He comes to Newcomb; teaches History, then English; fine Shakespearean scholar; never known to flunk anyone.

Chapter II.—How he writes. Chief work, "My Revenge; or, Why I Make My Classes Write Essays."

Chapter III.—How it happens that our hero becomes the chief source of information as to the meaning of words of the English language.

BY MAUD WOODS.

A Declaration of Independence.

By the members of the Class of 1908 of Newcomb College, of the City of New Orleans, of the Parish of Orleans, of the State of Louisiana, of the United States of America, of the Western Hemisphere, the World, this day of our Lord, February twenty-second, nineteen eight.

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for a class to assert its individuality and to assume a free and independent position in the College, we, the members of the Class of 1908, do hereby submit the following resolutions to a candid world:

Resolved, That I will read "Romeo and Juliet."

[Signed] LAURA CUNNINGHAM.

I won't wear my cap and gown.

[Signed] EMMA DREYFOUS.

I will go to Carnival balls.

[Signed] GLADYS RANDOLPH.

I say I want to vote.

[Signed] IRMA HILLER.

I am resolved not to play basket-ball on Monday afternoon, when I have Chemistry, Greek, and Anglo-Saxon on Tuesday, unless it suits my inclination.

[Signed] MARY CALLAN.

I will cultivate that excellent thing in woman—a voice ever soft, gentle and low.

[Signed] GLADYS WEIL.

I do promise to forget entirely that the Class of 1907 ever existed.

[Signed] HELEN HINTON.

I will laugh and giggle whenever I please and at whomsoever I please.

[Signed] MARY CAMPBELL.

I just won't do any extra work; my eyes are weak.

[Signed] LILLIAN GOLDSTEIN.

I do resolve not to be afraid, not to tremble, for what can Harkness do unto me?

[Signed] JANIE LAPEYRE.

I won't mix society with Newcomb, let the T. D. say what it will.

[Signed] JESSIE TEBO.

I just won't write any more class histories.

[Signed] MAUD WOODS.

I will shout as much as I please at the foot-ball games.

[Signed] SHIRLEY STEARNS.

It is my sovereign will to be the neatest thing on earth and to dress nine times a day.

[Signed] NAOMI MAYER.

I will be dignified.

[Signed] NINA PREOT.

I do solemnly swear to wear big hats—big enough for both Edna and myself.

[Signed] MIRIAM DANZIGER.

I do protest strenuously against this millions for class plays, glee clubs, etc., and not one cent for the treasury.

[Signed] FLAVIA HEREFORD.

I will break ten test-tubes a day, if it so pleases me.

[Signed] ANITA NORMAN.

I will be fanatic.

[Signed] FANNY WEIL.

Wednesday evening class-meetings will henceforth last until breakfast next morning, instead of just to dinner-time.

[Signed] ADELE MONROE.

I won't go to chapel more than twice a month.

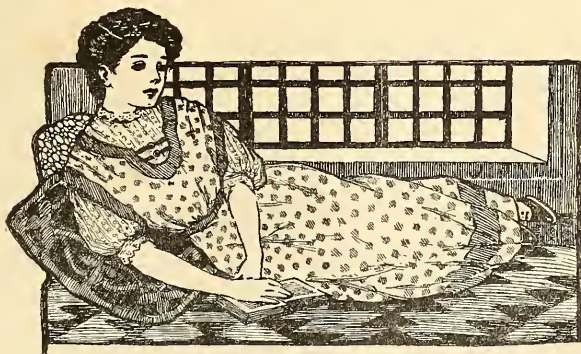

[Signed] ELSIE WALDHORN.

I will prize this luncheon gift above everything.

[Signed] NELLIE HART.

Lastly, we, the members of the Class of 1908, are resolved not to allow any "Hero" to break up our tea-parties, even though she may have a fondness for Boston tea-parties.

[Signed] CLASS OF 1908.

PROFESSOR BUTLER: "What kind of cases are tried in the ecclesiastical courts?"

NEWCOMB STUDENT: "Well, the priests have all the trials of matrimony—and things like that."

THE WORRIED GIRL: "I just wish our English exam. would be on the 21st of June."

MOTHER: "Why, dear?"

THE WORRIED GIRL (languidly): "Since it's the longest day in the year, I might be able to finish half of Dr. Butler's exam."

HE: "Are you going to leave anything to public institutions when you die?"

SHE: "Yes; I intend to will my brain to Newcomb."

WHEN THEY WENT TO COLLEGE

A Friend of Yours?

"Oh, goodness! Are we late? I hope not; I love to be early at a foot-bal game. But where can we sit? I think people are so forward to rush in and take all the good seats! Well, this will do. Oh, look at the crowd! and here come the Tulane rooters! I adore a Hick's parade. What are they saying? Oh, how very plebeian!—not comme il faut at all.

"You know I am so ignorant on athletic subjects, especially foot-ball; but then, you will explain every detail—yes, I insist, every teeny, tiny point—for you know so much about everything. Oh, see the big man out in the field! The coach, you say? What do they have to have a coach for? Why can't the captain coach the team or the team coach themselves? They ought to know how; they shouldn't need to be taught. But then, most men are so stupid. Oh, I am just excited to death! Look! here come the players! Aren't they glorious? Wave your colors. I love blue and that dear dull green—both so becoming to me. What are the idiots stooping down for? Starting! Oh, look at that man with the ball! He is wonderful! I adore black hair; it's so romantic-looking. Why is that idiot chasing around the outskirts? He hasn't even a cute nose-guard on his face. The umpire? Oh! But look! the big tall man on ——'s team sat on another man's head; the rude thing did it on purpose, too. Mean pig! But look! the little man is getting up! Isn't he grand and lovely? He has such high color, and laughs all the time. Oh, look! he got the ball and ran between two poles! Why did he do that? I am sure I can't see. A goal? Oh! See, do notice the big, tall man with a cap on; he is jumping up after a ball. All the men worship him? Well, I don't blame them; look at his build. Look! he's doing lots of stunts. Isn't he adorable? Oh, horrible! Someone is killed! I can't look. I know he is dead; his face looks as pale as a ghost. Do you think he will ever come to life again? He is so young, too; only a Freshie. He's up, but he is limping. Will he go in again? you know the little fat man did; wasn't it brave of him? But they always let him hold the ball first; I don't think that's fair, but then, maybe it's on account of his broken rib. Oh, disgusting! Did you see that man put a dirty sponge in his mouth? You know, I declare I saw a man wipe his filthy face with the same sponge. Oh, it makes my blood run cold! It's nothing short of holding his life in his hands, for think of the bacteria! I know one of those players on the end. You know, one day—you know how jolly he is, and what a terrible tease—well, one day I was coming down the street— Oh! Oh! Goody! A man on the other side is hurt. I hope he can't play, but is not badly injured. Pshaw! He's in again and has the ball. Look! they fell on him, poor thing! I think it is blood-thirsty to jump on a man like that. Savages! Oh, excitement! A man blew a whistle! They stopped. Why don't they go on? They hadn't finished yet; they were only half-way to the posts. I think it is very unsatisfactory not to finish. Oh! let's hurry and get out before the crowd. I want to see the players. Aren't they glorious? All heroes! And do let's find the cute, interesting one with such lovely eyes. . . . By the way, who won? Tulane, of course. How silly of me!"

Pierrot—His Valentine.

Dear little love, I have no rose to bring you,
I have no jeweled ring to glad yon eyes;
Saddest of all, I have no song to sing you
That is not spoilt with laughter till he lies
Dumb at the last. Must Pierrot follow after
Folly and fools? He has no choice but laughter.

You, little love, I bring my heart to cherish,
Knowing your hands be soft, and tender—kind;
I, who go laughing by, tho' kingdoms perish,
Bring you my heart and pray your eyes be blind
Unto my mirth—mirth 's good enough—I care not—
Only, I would be sad for you—and dare not.

FANNIE HEASLIP LEA, '09.

We have a Professor name Metz,
 Who for Freshmen a lively pace sets.
 When he asks them, "Why?"
 They quite frequently lie;
 For Freshmen most often forget.

There was a venerable Dean named Chaillé,
 Who Freshies and Sophs. oft would rally,
 To see what they knew;
 And they often felt blue,
 When he would come up with their tally.

Percussion Notes.

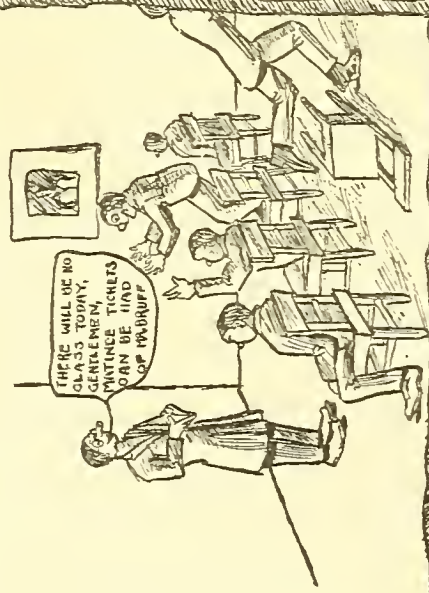

From the Board of Health I hail,
Let the wise attorneys quail,
For, of course, I know my subject very well.
As for making copper pots
And for thinking out deep plots,
Boys, honest, on the level, I excel.

Now, this sphygmograph will show,
As of course I 'd have you know,
Such actions therapeutic cannot be;
On this point some light to throw,
To my practice long I 'll go,
For I and Stevens never can agree.

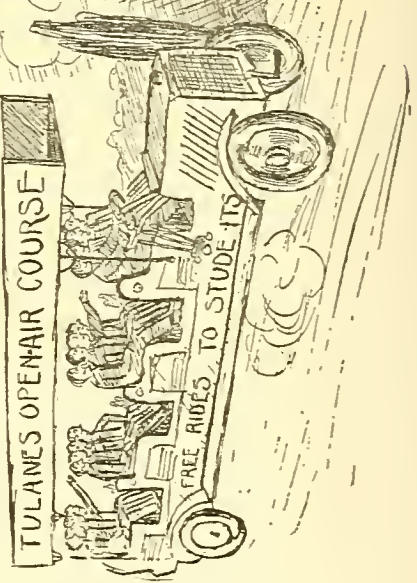

Dr. Matas says it 's right,
And that satisfies me quite;
To me he is the foremost in the roster;
But on minor surgery
My embellished notes you 'll see,
Printed where I got them—in Da Costa.

I 'll have order in my lab,
And no songs or noise or gab,
And numbers, all like convicts, you shall wear.
If my microscopes you break,
From your breakage fee I 'll take;
Of your afternoon decorum, have a care.

D. CHARLIE

The Power Behind the Throne.

At the foot of the pavilion steps the boy hesitated, crushing his soft hat nervously in his lean brown hands. It wasn't so very long ago that she had come toward him down those very steps—slim and white, with only a scarf of thin cool green held in a blur against the front of her gown. Her hair was shadowy and dark, under the stars, and her eyes.

The boy's father cleared his throat for the third time, and the boy started guiltily.

"Well, sir," said the boy, donning his hat hurriedly, "you've seen about all the buildings now, I think. The pavilion—we have the germans here, you know—all the college dances; they're no end of fun—when you don't happen to be cramming for an exam." The red that had crept up under the tan of his cheeks died slowly down, but he was evidently talking to gain time.

"'Crammin' fer exams,'" repeated the older man; "that's what you were doin', perhaps. Dick, my boy, I'm mighty proud of you. It means a heap to me to see you hold your own with all these young chaps." He laid a roughened though well-kept hand upon the boy's shoulder, and his eyes misted—very suddenly and inexplicably to the boy, whose ideal of a man was as yet rather young, and who spoke quickly to ward off any possible show of emotion.

"I came pretty near to going under, dad. When it came to taking that Greek exam—"

"I know, my boy." His father's voice was husky with feeling. "It wasn't as easy as rollin' off a log; but you thought of the old man, I guess, of all that you and your work were meanin' to him." The boy moved uneasily. "I want you to know, Dick, that I appreciate your reason for doin' it." A clock across the square boomed dully, and the boy raised his head eagerly at the sound.

"I'm afraid I'll have to leave you, sir. I've an engagement. I—er—" He nodded over his shoulder, flushing again to the roots of his fair hair under the sudden laughter in his father's keen eyes.

"Oh! well," the man assured him, turning back towards the College buildings as he turned away, "I guess I can take care of myself for awhile. And, Dick!" The boy paused. "Er—give the young lady my regards." He chuckled softly to himself as he moved off, but the boy did not hear, for he was busily going over in his mind the happenings of the past weeks, and now and then he smiled rather sheepishly.

After she had come toward him down the pavilion steps that night—the girl with the shadowy, dusky hair, of whom he had been thinking when his father interrupted him—they had taken the long way home, and as they walked, with the clear, cool sky above their heads, the earth-sweet air from across the campus fresh upon their faces, he had told her of his failure in the Greek exam and his subsequent determination to “cut it all”—leave College. He had been rather melodramatic in the telling. “It means the end of the whole business for me,” he had said, in a tone the remembrance of which overwhelmed him with embarrassment.

And she?

“It is my duty, as small sister to the college widow, to advise you, Dick,” she had said. “The widow can’t afford to, you see, or she’d find herself the college maiden aunt in no time; but with the small sister it’s different. Your case isn’t as bad as it might be; why you have two chances yet.” He had not forgotten the two chances; but what was the use, he argued, of cramming a lot of truck that would do him no good afterwards, in the office, on the floor of the Exchange, in any of the places where he expected to spend his life? Nobody could expect him to do such a thing.

“But your father,” she had reminded him; “he wants you to go through, doesn’t he?”

Dad? Yes, of course. Dad was a self-made man; had worked his way up from the bottom, and was proud of it. Who wouldn’t be? That was what the boy would have liked to be able to do; he could have worked at that.

“But dad won’t let me!” he had exclaimed to the girl in exasperation. “He’s proud, tickled to death at having done it himself, but he insists on my sticking at a lot of books like any girl.” The one at his side had giggled delightedly at the concentrated contempt he managed to put into the word (his face burned at the recollection), and he had stumbled on awkwardly.

“Oh, I say! you know I think girls are just fine; they’re dandy; I certainly do think a lot of them.” The boy frowned impatiently at the recollection of all that he had said and the contradiction of the tone in which he had declared that he couldn’t “stand for the books.” The words were final, but the tone had pleaded for advice, for encouragement or censure, and the girl had answered the appeal, not laughing now, her eyes very bright and earnest, and just a bit troubled.

“And your father, Dick,” she had said quietly; “have you thought of what your going—your failure—will mean to him? You are the only boy. He is trying to mold you into an ideal; all of his highest hopes, his wildest longings, his fondest ideas, he is putting into you. Do you realize what it will mean to him to have his idol broken simply because you have not the moral strength and courage to go on?” Her words had stung, and the boy had cried out:

“But he has no right, Nell, don’t you see?—that’s just it! Each man must shape his own life, and clay that has been worked over from someone else’s molding is never as good. I have my own highest hopes, my own wildest longings, my own fondest ideas. Dad would have given anything to have worked his out in himself; why won't he realize that, and let me work mine?"

But the girl would not understand. There were other reasons, she had pleaded. "The gaining of all-time friends in books, the victory over self—they're all such big reasons, and I can't seem to get just the right words." The boy smiled a bit as he remembered how self-contempt had stolen his voice, and how the girl, mistaking his silence, had lost her temper—or found it, perhaps that was better—and had said a great many things, only one of which he had remembered clearly.

"I have no respect for you!" she had flared suddenly, and it was as though she had struck him across the face; "absolutely no respect, Dick Bolton! Do you hear? A boy who—" She had broken off suddenly and darted up the steps, but at the door she had paused. "I am sorry," she had said, in a voice that did not betray the fact; "but I cannot be friends with a boy I cannot respect." Then the door had closed behind her, and he had gone back to the Dormitory to spend the rest of that night and the many nights that followed cramming for the exam.

She would have to respect him!

He had not only passed the exam, but passed it well. Only this morning he had gotten the notice of his success; now he was on his way to her.

Someone was calling him, and he raised his head at the sound to find that he had reached her gate and she was coming toward him, laughing happily as she came.

"Oh, I've heard, Dick, I've heard how you won!" she cried. "I've such heaps of respect for you! I would really like to shake hands with you—if you don't mind very much." Her lips curved demurely as she held out her hand with a pretense of supplication, but her eyes sobered suddenly.

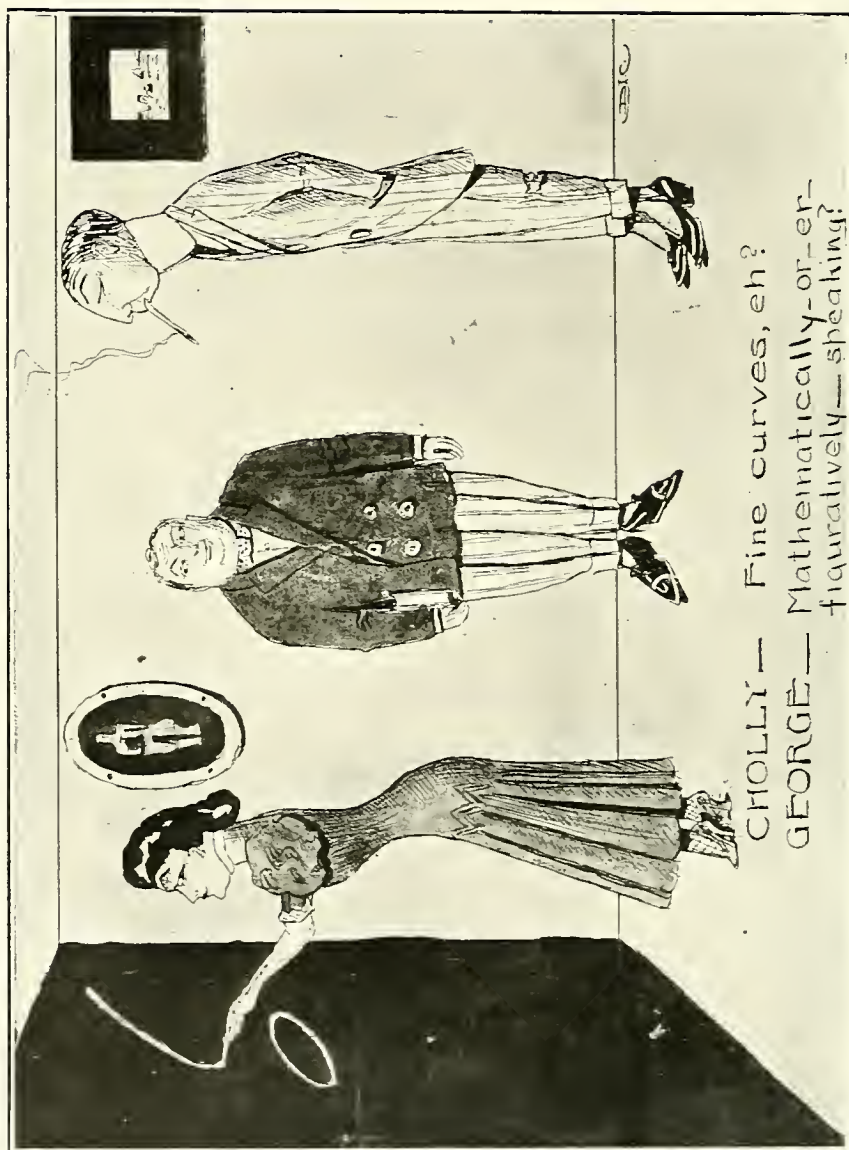

"Aren't you very happy," she asked, "to think of what you have done and for what reasons? Please say that I helped you to see the reasons; that I was a really truly friend."

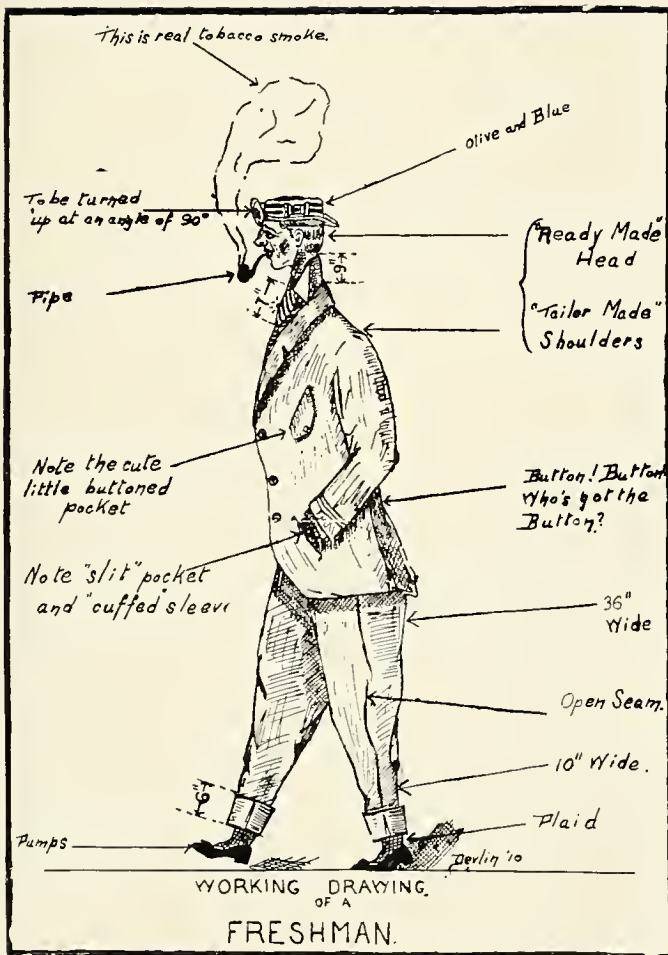

The boy smiled a bit whimsically as he laid the notice of his success in her hands.

"Thanks for the respect," he said, and his voice was very youthfully triumphant. "As to the reasons for doing what I did—the credit all goes to you."

THE CLASS OF 1910.

- I.—No Freshman allowed in Gibson Hall unless accompanied by his parents.
- II.—Thou shalt not visit Del Corral's.
- III.—Thou shalt not indulge in Tobacco in any shape or form; Taffy for yours
- IV.—Thou shalt not wear Celluloid Collars, for we, the CLASS OF 1910, do protect and uphold the Chinese population of this great metropolis.
- V.—No "Limburger" for yours. For Shoes, go to the blacksmith shop.
- VI.—Ye shall never touch Liquor, for it blasts the moral character of the youth.
- VII.—Socks and Ties are to be seen and not heard. No Derbies and Canes allowed, under penalty of the Hair-brush Degree.
- VIII.—Pencil-boxes and Slates to be carried in paper sacks
- IX.—Before retiring, say your Prayers according to the Epistle of Saint Wilkinson to the Infants.
- X.—Thou shalt speak to SOPHOMORES only when addressed.
- XI.—Consult "Jerry" at once about Tools to be used to clean your finger nails.
- XII.—Freshmen desiring a box Tulane Night will bring it with them.
- XIII.—The middle of Canal Street is the proper sidewalk for "1911."
- XIV.—Make your last will and testament before Founders' Day.
- XV.—That you shall take extreme measures to eradicate the epidemic of "Itch," of which your Class is the victim, and which has been unknown since the time of Peter the Hermit. See Dr. Kahle. Consultation free.
- XVI.—Thou shalt not flirt, for "To flirt is to sin."
- XVII.—Purchase Library Tickets at once. Armour Caldwell, agent.
- XVIII.—Always rise and give any member of the Honorable CLASS OF 1910 your seat when in a crowded car.
- XIX.—You are needed in the Museum to illustrate EMBRIOLOGY. Go there at once
- XX.—Spend your time and not your money at Penny Wonderland.
- XXI.—Spend your money and not your time at Gusach's Corner.
- XXII.—"It is more blessed to give than to receive"; therefore lend your money freely to Sophs
- XXIII.—Thou shalt not covet the SOPH'S social position, his Sox nor his Ties, his Hats nor his Yell, for if you do you'll land in ———, where snow-flakes melt.

When Benjamin Franklin and his kite brought electricity from the clouds, he little dreamed that in the twentieth century the electric current would have become a commercial necessity. Yet to-day, to properly illuminate your store, you must use the electric arc and incandescent bulb, and your factory is antiquated if it is not fitted with modern direct-connected electric motors.

You literally burn your way into the mind of the public by using a sign of glowing lamps at night and keep yourselves and others cool in summer by means of electric fans. 'Phone our expert, 175; he'll call around and tell you how cheaply all this can be done.

THIS INTERESTS YOU.

Why buy a greatly inferior piano at but little less when you can secure the STEINWAY, whose name and fame are familiar household words all over the civilized globe—the piano preferred by the greatest artists and scientists everywhere—the piano that is universally recognized as the standard of the world?

Even though you might save a hundred dollars on your first outlay by choosing an instrument that may be represented to you as "just as good as the Steinway," would it not be sound economy to buy a piano that will at all times give the greatest possible measure of satisfaction from a musical standpoint, and which, moreover, will by far outlast any other piano? Would it not be cheaper in the end to buy a Steinway?
